Consent For Computed Tomography (CT Scan)

Your physician has ordered a CT of your _____. It is a commonly performed radiology examination, which will provide valuable information and is usually completed in 20 minutes. The examination may require an intravenous injection of contrast material which contains iodine. Very rarely, mild allergic reactions to the injection may occur, which generally disappear without treatment or respond promptly to medication. Severe allergic reactions, including fatalities occur so rarely that your physician feels that any possible risk is far outweighed by the medical information that can be gained by the examination.

Please sign below indicating that all your history/information is correct and you understand/agree to have this examination.
